The ladies of Alder River Grange will serve a baked bean and pastry supper at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Howe, East Bethel Thursday evening, Dec. 15.

Letters from Mr. Strobel give most satisfactory accounts of his health, and gratifying results are already showing his success as Chief Adviser to the King of Siam.

Miss Senda Berensen who spent the summer at Dr. Gehring's has joined her brother, Brenhard Berensen, the famous Florentine artist, in his home in Florence.

Mr. and Mrs. Z. W. Bartlett of East Bethel, very pleasantly entertained a number of their friends last Friday evening; seven tables were set for progressive whist, and Mrs. J. M. Bartlett and George H. Swan received the first prizes.

The W. C. T. U. met with Mrs. O. M. Mason, Tuesday afternoon. After discussing the question, "If the Prohibitory Law is in any degree a failure, is it the fault of the law or the people?" Mrs. Mason read a very interesting report of the National W. C. T. U. Convention recently held in Washington, D. C.

Just take a look at those old books which may have long since been relegated to the attic or better, may be fondly cherished for the gems which they contain, and if you find among them a reader which your father used in his school days, bring it to the News office and make the editor happy. It will receive good care and will be returned promptly.

Mrs. Richardson of New York and Biddeford, Miss Andrews of Cluchnat, Miss Rockwell of Boston and Manchester-by-the-Sea, Miss Goldmark of New York, Miss Miller, sister of Dr. Dickerson Miller of Columbia University, of Philadelphia, Miss Colwell and Miss Mavitt of Cleveland, Mr. James Murliard of Edinburg and Cambridge, are with Dr. Gehring for the winter.

Mrs. I. W. Cole of East Bethel, who suffered a severe shock a few months ago, passed away at her late home last Saturday morning, at the age of 61 years, 5 months. Funeral services were held at Locke Mills, Monday at 11 a. m., conducted by Rev. F. C. Potter of this village. Only a year ago this month Mr. Cole was called upon to part with his only daughter, and he, and the remaining relatives, have the deepest and sincerest sympathy of their many friends in this second sorrow.

BUSINESS POINTERS.

Business Readers will be profited in this column at eight cents per line, reckoning six words to the line.

My store will be open every evening next week. L. M. STEARNS.

Silver novelties make nice presents, while the price is small.

Boys watches $1.00 and $1.50 at King's.

Miss Hall's store will be open every evening from Dec. 19 to 24.

Rings at King's.

Diamonds not only are a desirable gift, but a good investment as well. King has a few bargains in good ones.

To accommodate customers King's store will be open every evening the week before Christmas.

Note the change in Miss Hall's ad. page 4.

The winter term of Gould's Academy opened Tuesday.

The Y. P. C. U. gave a Welcome social, Monday night, to the returning Academy students.

The Ladies' Club will meet Thursday afternoon at the usual hour, at the home of Mrs. Gilbert Tuell.

The second in the series of social dances given by the Bethel Athletic Association will be held in Odeon Hall, to-morrow night.

The Brick school was closed Tuesday afternoon, to allow teachers and pupils to attend the funeral of Freddie Morgan, a scholar in the grammar grade.

The annual Christmas Sale and Supper given by the Ladies' Club was held Wednesday evening. Both were well patronized especially the delicious supper which was served at six o'clock. The net proceeds were $112.

A young woman employed as a telephone-operator is often of assistance to the Company's patrons in things which at first do not seem to be part of her duty. The New England Telephone company, for example, trains its operators to summon assistance when notified of accidents; to inform inquiring subscribers of the arrival of steamships; and to furnish information concerning fires, events of public interest, and similar happenings.

Saturday morning, the community was saddened when it was learned that Freddie Morgan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Corlis Morgan, had passed away. Only one short week of illness and the bright, cheerful boy had finished his work here.

He will be missed by neighbors and friends who had learned to love the sunny faced lad who always had a smile and was so thoughtful of others, rendering little services gladly. The funeral was held at the home of his parents, Tuesday afternoon. Rev. F. C. Potter, his pastor, spoke words of comfort and hope. The school was suspended and the teachers and the members of his class attended in a body. Flowers from the family and friends and a pillow from his schoolmates, teacher and Superintendent Hastings were silent tokens of the love and respect in which he was held. Interment was in Woodlawn cemetery. The family receive a large degree of sympathy.

Services at Congregational Church.

Next Sunday morning the pastor will give the last of the "Un" series of sermons, topic, "Unreligious Religion." Sunday school at 12 m.

Christian Endeavor meeting at 7 o'clock, topic, "Whatever he would like to have me do." At this service the last chapter of "Eiram Gold's Religion" will be read by Prof. Hanscom, the title "From Earth to Heaven."

A very cordial invitation is extended to all.

MYSTERY
OF
ST. RULE'S

CHAPTER XII.

THE

Lord Cantyre had arrived in time for afternoon tea. David had sent in a huge array of a certain deadly kind
of Chris mas bun, shortbread, and hot scones. Bertie, with his mouth full,
had already begun tea, when Cantyre
and his friend were shown in to the drawing-room, and shortly afterwards
Professor Luttrell's coat surreptitiously dusted by David in the hall
with a very large clothes-brush, appeared in great haste to make them
welcome. David's brush, with a deperate "wait a wee, sir," having followed him to the very door.

"I intended to be in time to make
you welcome—you and your friend,
Lord Cantyre," he said, "but I have been unusually busy in the laboratory.
I had been obliged to dismiss a very capable man (I really think, Molly
my dear, I must have Sandy back again),
and I could find nothing when I wanted it. I do not know if you are at all scientific, sir?" and he turned to the Colonial, who laughed and shook his head, "or take any interest in chemical research?"

"I don't know anything about chemistry, Professor. Lord Cantyre tells me that is your line," he said; "but I know
a good deal about mining and engineering, though I say it, and I used to dabble a bit in stones before I left the old country. I have got my lordship's diamond here in my pocket. He tells me that you are going to tell him
how to cut it. It's a fine stone. 'Advance Australia' they should have christened it, I say."

Eve entered then, and Lord Cantyre
went up to her eagerly, introducing
his friend to her.

"We have brought the stone, Miss Luttrell. After tea Marsland shall produce it, and the Professor can report. I say, Professor, what a joke it is turned out that it wasn't a diamond
after all! I say, I never thought of that."

"It's a diamond, right enough, and
a splendid one," Marsland said, "as you will see. Your Uncle Ralph wants the future countess to wear it, set as a brooch like the Koh-i-noor. He was always talking of that. He said first he'd call it the 'Countess of Cantyre.'"

"Well, I wish you'd come and have
tea now," Bertie said rather crossly
from the tea-table. "These scones are getting quite cold, and Cameron has sent to say he wants particularly to see me above five. I want to see your diamond, Cantyre, before I go. Come along, Molly, pour out, and I'll hand
round."

They all went up to the tea-table
then, where Molly dispensed cups, and
the earl helped himself to a large slab
of the bun.

They finished tea, and the old man
led the way to the library, saying the light was better there.

Molly had lit one of the gas jets near the fire, but Mr. Marsland went to the window instinctively, when he took a little leather case from his inner breast-pocket, and then laid something white and sparkling on the red
hazle of the table-cover in the window.
They all gathered round eagerly; Eve
lifted the diamond and held it up.

"To think that this large dewdrop,
this piece of white fire, should cost so much!" she said. "And although I suppose it is dreadful ignorance on my part, I have really seen pure jewels in the Palais Royal which seemed to shine as well. This is very beautiful, of course. Dear me! yes, it is very fine! Take it away from me, Lord Cantyre, before I break any of the commandments!"

He took the jewel from her laughingly, but put it against the dark-
green serge of her dress for a moment,
looking round as if for admiration.
Against the dark-green the stone sparkled magnificently. It was about the size of a hazel-nut, a very white
diamond with magnificent facets.

"That looks well, doesn't it?" Cantyre said; and then he put the stone
against the ruddy waves of Eve's hair,
a good deal of color in his boyish face. He was evidently pleased with her admiration.

"Yes, it is a jolly big diamond. But for my part I shouldn't care to have money locked up in that way," Bertie remarked, his hands in his pockets.
He had never liked Cantyre, and he was acting on an impulse now which prompted him to say something, anything, to belittle this possession. "You can't wear that stone on many occasions—only at big functions, suppose.
For my part, if it were mine, I should have it cut up and get my money's worth. What a Jew any man would look with that thing stuck in his shirt-front!"

"I am surprised at you, Bertie!" The Professor looked at his son with deep reproach. "That is the speech of a Philistine, sir, and a Philistine of the deepest dye! Cut it up! You would destroy a beautiful gem, a beautiful specimen, for the sake of money! The diamond is interesting, as the largest yet found in Australia. It is beautiful
in form and color, perfectly flawless,
and when properly cut—that business
has been sadly bungled, Lord Cantyre—
it will be more valuable, I think,

than has been thought. I shall write down my views as to the cutting, later."
He was examining the stone with his pocket magnifying-glass as he spoke.

"I am glad you like it, Professor,"
Cantyre said lightly. "I know Uncle
Ralph will be pleased to hear what you say. But it down on the red hazle
again, Marsland; I want to see how it sparkles."

The young people had gathered round the table again, and Cantyre was gently rolling the edge of the cloth so that the stone ran to and fro, like a little iridescent bubble of a glittering rain-drop. The old man turned to the Australian then.

"I should like to show you some of my collection, sir, if you care to look at it," he said. "I have some models
of famous jewels which I think would interest you in this connection, and some very fine specimens of New Zealand jade. My best cabinets I have put into the old stables at the back.
We can reach them through this passage."

"Now, Dad, don't go and catch cold in the stables!" Molly cried, "besides and shut all the doors." She was looking up from the floor where she was kneeling beside the table. The Professor nodded to her absently, leading the way by a door which opened
from the library and led down to a passage into the stables, and coach-house at the back. Both were full now of many cabinets and cases of
minerals, some of them still unpacked.
He loved nothing better than to show
his treasures to an interested spectator.

"Marsland will enjoy seeing the collection," Cantyre said then, stann-
ing by Eve's side. "He is rather a clever chap in his way, and I think some of his experiences might interest Professor Luttrell. He was telling me today about a vein of—"

The earl never finished his sentence.
Just at that moment a shriek of appalling length and ear-piercing quality
burst upon their ears, and he next
moment the drawing-room door was burst open widely, and Bethia, ap-
pass and panting, came rushing into the library.

"Fire!" she was shrieking at the
pitch of her voice. "Fire! murder!
We are all on fire in the kitchen! And David's lying dead on the floor! For pity's sake, Miss Molly, come and see!"

This was alarming enough to get everyone from the room, and a rush
was instantly made through the drawing-room, Bethia shrieking after them.
Once in the hall, an unmistakable
odor greeted them, and in the kitchen
a sufficiently alarming spectacle met their eyes. The china cupboard opening of the kitchen was wreathed in flames, which were hursting through the wall, and David lay unconscious
on her white stone floor, a mass of broken crockery surrounding her. The young men rushed at once to the cupboard, and, seizing a hatchet, Cantyre
began to break down the shelves, while Molly and Eve attended to the old servant and Bertie dashed on rather inefficient jugs of water. They saw very soon, however, that so small a supply was useless, and Bertie went rushing off, saying that he remembered
there was an old garden-hose in the at-
ticle and that he would fetch it down.

Just as he summoned the St. Rule's fire-engine! Cantyre said then, going to and fro to the scullery with pails of water, his coat off and his face already grimy and smoke-wreathed. "Is there a fire-engine? Do you know, Miss Luttrell? Now that I think, I don't know that I ever heard of one."

"There is a very old one, but I don't think it would be a bit of use," Molly
said, looking up from the floor, where she and Eve were bathing David's face. "I saw a fire in High Street lately, and when they did get the engine
up, all the house was leaking. It distributed shower-baths gratis on the crowd, while the fire blazed cheerfully
uninterrupted. I believe they are aptating about one in the Town Council.
I don't think it would be much use,
but Bethia might run up at once and
see. She could at least bring back some men. To stop sobbing and shrieking, Bethia, and run for help,
just as you are."

They were doing what they could,
but still David showed no signs of returning consciousness, and Eve left
the kitchen to get a bottle of smelling-
salts, while Cantyre worked on man-fully, holding the flames at least in check. Some time passed before David opened her eyes slowly at last, as Eve entered with the smelling-salts
and some brandy, and by and by Bertie came hurrying back with the hose.

"I had an awful business to find it,"
he said, "but here it is at last. I'll fasten this end to the scullery tap, Cantyre, and then we'll soon get the better of the flames. Where the dickens is Bethia. That's it, Cantyre!
Now, we'll soon put this thing out! Off
we go! Take care of yourself, Molly!
Don't deluge the clock, Cantyre, Lord
what a mess!"

"Bethia has gone to see about the fire-engine," Molly said, at which her brother jeered loudly. "You might as well fetch the Square Tower! But if she brings a few men I can employ them. However did David manage to burst up like this? She's coming to, though. Look at her. I say, wouldn't
a douche from this make her sit up?
That's right—we've got that end out!"

The old woman had opened her eyes,
and now gazed vacantly before her,
waving aside Eve's smelling-bottle as
she tried to sit up.

"Have we got the fire out?" she gasped weakly. "I was trying to save the mistress's dinner-set when I fell off
the steps. This is an awful like thing!
Mr. Bertie, have you saved the best china?"

"The best china is all in smithereens
at your feet, David," was the comforting rejoinder. "But we're getting the fire out. That's right, Cantyre, we will save the house. This is that blessed fireplace next door—it's just against that wall. I always knew this would happen. Oh, here are Bethia

and Mr. Neil the plumber! I say, Mr.
Neil, here's a pretty mess!"

Bethia had returned with three or four men, and presently the kitchen was full. David was sufficiently herself once more to regard the men with suspicion and disfavor, and hastily wiping the water from her face and neck, she was able to keep her eyes
upon her kitchen, and upon the fragments of china, which she hastily
seized and wofully piled upon the table.
She allowed the men, however,
to help Lord Cantyre and Bertie to tear
down all the remaining shelves and extinguish the last flames, and she was even civil to Mr. Forret, when she saw that gentleman had come in with the plumber, and was now working as efficiently as any one. She allowed afterwards that "Sandy had his hand
on his shoulders," he had won her approval by rescuing a very fine tureen
from a top shelf, which had somehow managed to escape the general devastation. He was very careful, too, not to spoil this unwanted state of affairs,
and stoically refused a glass of beer
when Bertie sent for it, aware that David's eye was upon him.

"I've turned over a new leaf, sir,"
he said solemnly, with a deep sigh.
"I'm hoping you and David will say
a word in my favor to the Professor.
I hear he has got nobody to please
him since I left, and maybe after this
opera here, and all this mess is cleared
up, ye'll mind to say a word for me, David, for old acquaintance sake. I could come the morn's morn. I've been off work for weeks and I'm feeling fusionless and dune, for want o'
food!"

David, however, was not so easily
appeased and she only tossed her head
in answer, feeling that it would not do
to give him any promise, especially in a scene of such excitement. So with a polite nod and a "Weel, gude-day to ye, David," Sandy went off with the other men, and she began energetically
to dash off to the washhouse with the charred and broken shelves.

"I declare we have all worked like Trojans! Come and have a wash, Cantyre, and then we'll come down and
have some more tea—unless you'd like something stronger, Cantyre? I suppose my father and Marsland have been lost all this time in the stables,
and have heard nothing. If the blaze
had been in the laboratory, the governor would have heard, and been off his head. He'll be thankful to hear that it was only the kitchen."

The two young men went upstairs
then, and Molly and Eve returned to the drawing-room, just as the Professor and Mr. Marsland came into the library from the passage. Molly was putting coals on the fire—amid the general "—and it had been allowed to get very low—when her father and
the Australian came into the room;
Eve was standing at the French window, looking out into the darkness.
Her mind had reverted to Uncle Geoff
for a moment after the excitement,
and she asked herself again: Had he really left? It was such a wild and impossible scheme. For the Professor would be sure to see that the diamond was safely put away—And just
at that point she started, and something seemed to catch her heart. The diamond! They had left it on the table!
Was it there still? Had they all gone mad?

She went to the entrance to the library just as Marsland came towards her.

"What is this about a fire?" he said,
only half hearing Molly's explanation
to her father, and then he glanced at the table. "Where has Cantyre put his diamond? Loose in his pocket, I'll wager a guinea!"

"Where has he put it? It is there!
We left it there! Is it not there?"
She had grown white and then crimson, and something in the terror of her voice made Molly break off her description of the fire and come towards the door.

"It is certainly not here; he must have taken it," the Australian said.
"Don't be alarmed, Miss Luttrell. Cantyre has dropped it into his pocket."
"He didn't—he went rushing off,
just as we all did! It is here, it must be there—it must have fallen down!
He was rolling it about on the cloth
Eve, look—look on the carpet!"

Molly had gone down on her knees on the floor suddenly, white and trembling. The terror in her cousin's face was reflected in hers—it seemed as if mortal fear possessed them both.
Molly searched with her little hands
all over the carpet. She had saved the microscope which stood on the table
with feverish strength, lifted it down, and then shook the cloth. They were still searching wildly when the two young men entered, and Eve looked up at Cantyre.

Lord Cantyre, did you come in and take your diamond? Have you hid it? Is it frightened?"

Molly waited with a kind of sohb-
ing breath, and then her eyes went to Bertie, who was lounging behind the earl, seeming very little concerned, it appeared at their alarm.

"No, I certainly didn't hide it. I declare I'd forgotten all about it," Cantyre said. "By Jove! you don't mean to tell me the thing's gone! That can't be possible, for there has been no one but ourselves in the house. At least,
I'm sure I didn't hear the front-door
bell ring, and those fellows never left the kitchen. It can't have gone, Miss Luttrell. Let's look again. It must have rolled on to the floor."

"We have looked, Lord Cantyre," Molly said in a stifled voice; "it isn't
there. I have looked in all these corners."

POSSESSION OF LOUISIANA.

How Spain Secured It From and Returned it to France.

Spain acquired possession of Louisiana in 1763, after the treaty of peace
at Paris, when France, which had ceded Louisiana to Spain under the secret treaty of 1762, gave up all her
other possessions in North America to Great Britain. Spain held the territory for 37 years, returning it to France on the demand of Napoleon
Bonaparte, through the secret treaty of St. Ildefonso, October 1, 1800.

France did not take possession until after the sale to the United States,
when it did so in order to give a legal title to the purchase. The purchase gave this nation the control of the Mississippi river system and extended its title over a territory greater than the original area of the country.

Japan's Paper Kettles.

In the Japanese army every soldier
carries with him kettles which are made of paper, the invention of one Dejui. The kettle is made of ordinary thin Japanese paper. It is filled with water, and then water is poured over
it. It is hung over the fire, and in ten minutes the water is boiling. The kettle can be used eight or ten times,
and the cost of it is about 2 cents.

FAGIN'S KITCHEN.

Place in London Supposed to be One Described by Dickens.

At the bottom of Great Saffron Hill, London, is situated what at one time was one of the most hideous and dangerous of slums. It is a part of a ruinous old tenement, exactly answering to the description of the infamous den to which the Artful Dodger led Oliver Twist as a new "pal" for a visit to "Greenland." The den had several ominous looking staircases leading into dark and ill smelling passages, and had plenty of cubboards available for thieves' booty.

From the outhouses any of the light fingered gentry could easily have dropped into the street, while the adjacent house, condemned by the London City Council, was easily accessible. The last named tenement, formerly a haunt for vagrants, with all the conveniences of a thieves' kitchen had associations of the worst kind and has not come under the ban of the London Parliament a moment too soon.

Fagin was a real character named Isaac Touch, who, when raided by the police, was found to possess a peck measure of watches. He had the name of being a confederate in worse crimes than training young thieves and buying stolen property.

An Ashantee Baby Carriage.

The Ashantee baby rides astride his mother's hip secured by a band around him and her waist. Note now this one stares at the camera. Babies of uncivilized races are more attentive and inquisitive than ours. Their senses are naturally more acute and are further sharpened by their rough-and-tumble existence.

The King of Elms.
What is said to be the largest elm in New England and one of the greatest east of the Rocky Mountains is in the historic little town of Wethersfield, famed for its onion garden and its prison. The elm stands on the lower end of the old town square, opposite the Smith house, still occupied by descendants of John Smith, who planted the tree over 170 years ago.

At the base, where some of the massive roots, as they radiate from the trunk, protrude above the surface, the circumference is 55½ feet, while the main trunk above the ground is 22½ feet in circumference. According to Oliver Wendell Holmes's classification of elms, this would come easily within the first class, and with something to spare, for all elms with a girth of twenty feet a short distance above the ground he catalogued as of the first order of size. New England, with its multitude of great elms, can show few whose measure from two to four feet above the surface will be twenty feet.

Four huge branches spring from the trunk of the Wethersfield tree. Each one of them would make a big tree in itself.

Wants to Know What His Cats Say.

When Garner went on his silly lion cage expedition to Africa to learn the language of apes, we observed that he might better stay at home and construct a language from that most conversational of creatures, the domestic hen. The hen knows more, and says more in fifteen minutes than a monkey does in a week. But there is a man in a Maine town called Unjly who has elected an eremitic life with cats as his family, and he is getting records of their utterances by means of phonographs. He says he has worked out their system, and he goes out nights when his toms are particularly musical, and talks with them, in their own language. After all, why not? What the monkeys or hens or cats say can be of no possible importance. That they understand it among themselves is sure. But if any human being wants to amuse himself with these matters, he is very likely doing as well as if he concerned himself with the speech of his average fellow-men—which also is of no great consequence.—Springfield Republican.

An Enormous Squash.

It is said that a California farmer living near the city of Los Angeles recently raised a squash of such enormous dimensions that it was used as a stable for a calf. A hole was cut in one end large enough to put the animal inside and another made in the other end allowed its head to protrude. The weight of the squash was estimated at between 200 and 250 pounds.

The case of Miss Frankie Orser, of Boston, Mass., is interesting to all women.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I suffered misery for several years. My back ached and I had bearing-down pains, and frequent headaches. I would often wake from a restless sleep in such pain and misery that it would be hours before I could close my eyes again. I dreaded the long nights and weary days. I could do no work. I consulted different physicians hoping to get relief, but, finding that their medicines did not cure me, I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it was highly recommended to me. I am glad that I did so, for I soon found that it was the medicine for my case. Very soon I was rid of every ache and pain and restored to perfect health. I feel splendid, have a fine appetite, and have gained in weight a lot."—Miss FRANKIE ORSER, 14 Warrenton St., Boston, Mass.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

Surely you cannot wish to remain weak, sick and discouraged, and exhausted with each day's work. Some derangement of the feminine organs is responsible for this exhaustion following any kind of work or effort. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you just as it has thousands of other women.

A WOMAN AT THE BANK.

"Good morning," said the lady in fashionable attire, as she approached the Teller's window in the bank.

"Good morning," came from the busy Teller as he wiped the heads of preparation from his brow.

"Nice morning," continued the smiling female.

"Yes," said the Teller, turning his face away to escape the strong odor of violet extract.

"Family well?"

"Oh, yes, very well. What can I do for you, this morning?"

"Been on your vacation yet?"

"Not yet," very impatiently.

"Nice weather for vacation?"

"Yes."

"Family away yet?"

"No."

"Going soon, I suppose?"

"Something I can do for you?" said the Teller, very much out of patience, as he saw the line growing behind the fussy woman.

"Yes, let me see. What day is today?"

"To-day is Friday."

"Oh, yes, Friday. Yesterday was Thursday, of course."

"Those people are getting very impatient behind you, madam."

"Must keep you very busy here?"

"—I—uside."

"I suppose you're glad when Sunday comes, so you can have a day of rest."

"Do you want to make a deposit or draw some money, madam?"

"Oh, yes. I almost forgot; why, I want to make a deposit. Oh, dear, I've forgotten to make out the ticket, won't you make it out for me?"

"How much?" as the Teller mopped his brow for the 15th time.

"Let me see! I think it is $34," fumbling in her pocket.

"Your book, please."

"Oh, my! Now, isn't that too bad! I've come away and left the book and the money at home. Well, I'll have to drop in again. Good day."

Flannel and Linen.

Dr. Leonard Williams, in an article in the London practitioner, declares that flannel underclothing is a fraud.

"Dry flannel," he says, "is practically unabsorbent, whereas linen, cotton and silk are in different degrees very absorbent." He concludes that "woolen underclothing is, of all others, the best calculated to induce a relaxed and unresponsive condition of the skin."

Jewels in the Sultan's Treasury.

A correspondent writing from Constantinople to a Paris Journal claims, as the result of personal inspection, to give details of the collection of jewels in the sultan's treasury. The turbans of all the sultans since Mahomet II. are there, all glittering with large gems of the purest water. There are also the royal throne of Persia, carried off by the Turks in 1514, and covered with more than 20,000 rubies, emeralds and fine pearls, and also the throne of Suleiman I., from the dome of which hangs over the head of the caliph an emerald six inches long and four inches deep. These two thrones are the chief objects of the collection.

Curiosity of Nature.

Chemists at one time believed that petroleum was formed in the depths of the earth by the action of water working on metallic carbons in a state of fusion. Now this statement is challenged by some geologists, who contend that petroleum is the result of the putrefaction of animals which ages ago were swallowed in enormous cataclysms, similar to that at Mount Pelée. This upheaval, says Prof. Engler, buried millions of prehistoric monsters, and during all the cycles of years that have elapsed since then the bodies of these animals have been distilled by Mother Nature in her immense laboratory beneath the earth's surface. The result of this distillation, according to this theory, is petroleum.

EXPENSIVE TO INHERIT MONEY.

In Italy Man Had to Pay Government More Than He Got.

In Italy it appears to be a somewhat expensive affair to inherit money, that is, if it be a small sum. Not long ago a young man died in the little town of Romagna, who left one lire fifty-eight centesimi, or not quite 34 cents. This sum, which had been deposited in the Post Office Savings Bank, became the property of the young man's father. As the amount was so small the father thought it unnecessary to make a declaration of the legacy as the law prescribes, especially as the stamped paper on which the declaration must be made would cost about 22 centesimi more than the money involved.

Three months afterward he received a demand from the local State Treasury for the payment of 14 lire 48 centesimi—nearly $3. Thinking a mistake had been made, he took no notice of this demand, with the result that later an official called upon him and demanded the immediate payment of 18 lire—$3.50. The father had not sufficient money in hand, so the official took possession of the man's furniture. The cost of this seizure brought the total sum to 30 lire, which the poor man had to pay that same evening to avoid the sale of his goods by auction.

Cork Thrift.

Because the world's supply of cork is rapidly diminishing, the cork perquisite in the big hotels and restaurants is now a valuable privilege. They are no longer thrown away, but are put in a box or barrel, where they accumulate until the cork picker comes around and pays a round sum in cash for all offered to him. The waiter now employs corkscrews which inflict the minimum amount of damage upon the cork, and in many places where large numbers of corks are extracted in a day a steel cork extractor is used.

Large corks may be recut with considerable profit. Others, which have been injured, can be cut so as to discard the injured portions and utilize that which is sound. Corks which have been discolored by grease can be cleaned by benzine, ammonia or lime and water. Those which have been discolored or flavored by medicine can be rendered usable by long continued holling with a small quantity of chloride of lime and subsequent drying in a kiln or oven. The finest quality come from champagne bottles, and always command a good price. It is possible to reuse them, and it is said that this is done by manufacturers both here and abroad.

Trewin's Elg Head.

"Excuse me, sir, but I guess you took my hat from the dining-room rack," said a gentleman with an Eastern accent as he tapped his finger on the shoulder of Senator James Trewin, of Cedar Rapids, who was Governor Cummings' chief opponent for nomination on the republican ticket two years ago.

"Well, I declare," responded the Senator, as he took off the eight and one-half size hat and looked at the inside. "I did not believe there was another man in the hotel with a head as large as mine. I beg your pardon. Senator Trewin is my name. I am practicing law here."

"Indeed?" queried the stranger. "I am looking for a lawyer, and one with a head as large as mine ought to serve my purpose." He called the Senator aside and after a short conference placed in his hands the fattest case that has ever been tried in Linn County so far as fees are concerned.

The Magician's Coat.

Nearly every one has seen at some time the men of magic doing their wonderful tricks, producing articles from the air, as it would seem. Many of us have said, "He has it hidden, but where?" The answer is shown in our illustration. Who would think the innocent dress coat could be the means of deception, but if you will notice the many pockets and the convenient spots where they are placed, one can then see that our conjurers are only mortal after all, and the old adage, "Practice makes perfect" is the key note of his success.

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS
The more Magazines there are, the more Indispensable is The Review of Reviews
"Indispensable." "The one magazine I feel I must take." "The world under a field-glass." "An education in public affairs and current literature."—these are some of the phrases one hears from noted people who read the Review of Reviews. The more magazines there are, the more necessary is the Review of Reviews, because it brings together the best that is in all the most important monthlies of the world. Such is the flood of periodical literature that nowadays people say that the only way to keep up with it is to read the Review of Reviews. Entirely over and above this reviewing section, it has more original matter and illustrations than most magazines, and the most timely and important articles printed in any monthly.
Probably the most useful section of all is Dr. Albert Shaw's illustrated "Progress of the World," where public events and issues are authoritatively and lucidly explained in every issue. Many a subscriber writes, "This department alone is worth more than the price of the magazine." The unique cartoon department, depicting current history in caricature, is another favorite. The Review of Reviews covers five continents, and yet is American, first and foremost. Men in public life, the members of Congress, professional men, and the great captains of industry who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided that it is "indispensable."

OBITUARY.

ELBRIDGE GERRY GROVER.
The death of Elbridge G. Grover at Berlin Mills, Nov. 24, closed a long and useful career and removed one of the oldest residents of this city. Mr. Grover was a veteran of the Civil war and had been in poor health for several years previous to his death.
He was born in Newry, Me., February 26, 1832. He attended the public schools of Newry, and when thirteen years of age went to Saco, Me., where he was employed in a saw mill. When fourteen years of age he was running a gang saw in that place.

When about fifteen years of age he went to sea and followed this life for two years after which he came to this region and ran a saw in an old mill at the Cascades. This was some fifty years ago. He afterward engaged in the same line of work in different places in this region.

June 18, 1858, he was married to Miss Abby Kimball of Albany, Me., and about this time he went to Bethel. In 1861 he enlisted in the Union army as corporal and served three and one-half years. He was continuously in the service, not having a furlough during that time. He participated in the battle of Cedar Creek and many others. For two years he was stationed at New Orleans where he had charge of a body of Confederate prisoners. He returned north after his discharge and came to this city some twenty-five years ago and has since made this his home. He has been employed much of the time by the Berlin Mills Co., and has worked chiefly as a millwright.

The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Grover: Eugene Herbert, born 1860; George S., 1865; Linda Estella, 1868; Viola E., 1873; Betram C., 1878.

Funeral services were held in Berlin, and the remains were taken to Gorham for interment.—Berlin Reporter.

Died in Candia, New Hampshire, Dec. 4, Jacob F. Holt, aged 56 years.

Mr. Jacob F. Holt was born in Bethel, and was the son of Daniel G. and Abigail Holt. At the age of twenty-four, in 1872, he married Miss Lucie A. E. Cross of Albany, and soon after moved to Lynn, Mass. In 1886, after a severe attack of pneumonia, he moved to Candia, N. H., where he engaged in the manufacture of shoes.

Mr. Holt was an honorable, public-spirited citizen, earnest and active in every good work. He was past Grand of Providence Lodge, I. O. O. F., a member of Palestine Encampment of Lynn, Mass.; also a Past Master of Rockingham Lodge, F. and A. M., Past Patron of Adah Chapter, O. E. S.; a member of Winona Rebecca Lodge of Candia and Trinity Commandery, Knights Templar of Manchester, N. H.

Funeral services were held at his late home Tuesday the 6th, when the remains were brought to his native town, and services were held at the residence of Mrs. Holt's nephew, E. E. Cross, on Thursday, at 11 a. m., Rev. F. E. Barton conducting the service. A profusion of beautiful floral tributes, testified to the loving remembrance of many friends. Mr. Holt is survived by a widow, five sisters and four brothers. Interment was at Woodlawn Cemetery, the brother acting as bearers.

Died in Cooper, Mich., Dec. 3, Matilda Grover, wife of William T. Chamberlain.

She fitted for a teacher under the instruction of Dr. N. T. Tru and taught a few terms of school in Bethel, but having a desire to see more of the world, she went, when a young woman, to Michigan and engaged there as a teacher. She will be remembered by a few of the older people of Bethel, and in the State of her adoption she will be mourned by a large circle of friends, as she was kind and charitable to those in need.

Revolution Imminent.

A sure sign of approaching revolt and serious trouble in your system is nervousness, sleeplessness, or stomach upsets. Electric Bitters will quickly dismember the troublesome causes. It never fails to tone the stomach, regulate the Kidneys and Bowels, stimulate the Liver, and clarify the blood. Run down systems benefit particularly and all the usual attending aches vanish under its searching and thorough effectiveness. Electric Bitters is only 50c, and that is returned if it don't give perfect satisfaction. Guaranteed by all Druggists.

Summer Home for Insane.

One of the most novel schemes in the treatment of insane patients ever tried in Maine bids fair to be utilized at another summer season by which the convalescent patients of the Bangor and Augusta hospitals will be given a summer outing on Widow's Island sixteen miles east of Rockland.

At the time of the Spanish-American war the federal government built a fine brick structure on the island, intending to use it as a marine hospital should occasion arise. It was never furnished and it is now at the disposal of the State should the State care to use it. It was for the purpose of inspecting the building that the trustees of the State Insane hospitals made a visit to the island Tuesday of last week, on a tug chartered for the purpose.

On the island was found a brick building which ex-Governor Robie described as being the equal of any hospital in Portland. The building is large enough to accommodate from fifty to seventy-five patients in good shape. It is advocated that parties of convalescents be taken to the island during the summer months and given an outing after their long months of confinement in the hospitals.

The island is a barren affair of five or six acres and an ideal place for the purpose. Some of the summer residents of North Haven might not like the idea of having an old hospital utilized for that purpose and may be heard from should the project receive favorable consideration from the trustees.

Nothing will be done about the matter at the present time although it will probably be one of the subjects to come up for consideration at the annual meeting of the board at Augusta the last of this month.

For a number of years past the convalescent patients at the Augusta hospital have been given a day's trip to the Isle of Springs, a small island in Sheepscot bay on an excursion steamer and a few have been taken there for a longer time but on rare occasions.

The members of the board of trustees in Rockland Tuesday were: Hon. Frederick Robie and Mrs. Robie of Gorham, Herbert T. Powers, Esq. of Fort Fairfield, Charles E. Field of Bangor, Hon. George E. Macomber of Augusta, Judge E. E. Chase of Bluehill, and Mrs. Ormandel Smith of Litchfield.—Press.

"Judge Not."

From a student's standpoint these words spoken during the delivery of that memorable sermon on the Mount were no more applicable to the needs of the multitude who heard them, than they are to the people of the present time. But we are deluded if we imagine that the Master meant to tell His disciples that they were to hold no standard of right according to which all judgment should necessarily be pronounced. Contrary to such an idea, He held the highest and most exacting standard, and insisted on bringing it forward as the rule by which men were to be tested.

The Master's religion is a religion of ideals which must be applied to life. And it would not be reasonable to suppose that He meant for His hearers to understand that they were never to judge either themselves or others according to the way in which they measured up to the moral standard which they held. Conscientious people must do this, for the Master did so constantly. One man was approved, another was censured according as each squared himself to the requirements of His religious ideals. He was a judge and He had a high standard, and estimated the worth of a man according to that standard.

Now, from the very fact that every man and woman is included in this category of "every one who sins," for what is sin but the willful violation of a known law, everyone on earth, forever needs the opportunity to become better than he is at any given time. This means also that we must be very fair and discriminating when we attempt to judge of the character of any one, for we cannot know the exact circumstances, both inward and outward, in which he is placed, and many of the victories over some inclination to do evil we never know.

So everyone must be treated with even justice, irrespective of wealth, social position, or the influence of friends. And against but few greater faults is the whole vocabulary of Webster inadequate to hurl expressions of reproach, than against the deplorable disposition to overlook the habitual evil conduct of many, because of social position or of wealth. It is disgusting and exasperating and wicked beyond question.

But the Master had been aiming His teaching directly at the Pharisees—very much like those who exist to-day. He had just spoken about the superficial character of their religion. Then turning to all other phase of it he touched upon the critical censorious nature of their practice. It is the carping, critical, fault-finding, censorious spirit which He condemns.

There are so many who have this most unhappy habit of seeing the faults and errors of others, and are ever ready to sit in judgment upon them, but seldom if ever, even suspect that they may be guilty of an equal fault, when if the truth were known, the object of their accusation might well say "Those who live in glass houses should never throw stones." So much pleasure and gratification which should come through an earnest quest for the good that can be found in everybody, is lost to all those who are always looking with critical eyes, listening with critical ears, and a disposition trained to the censorious spirit which the Master condemns. Every human eye that sees has a mote in it that obstructs the vision, and some visions are dimmed by even a beam, which is worse.

So while we must be keenly alive to great moral distinctions, and while we must sometimes speak our judgments, we must recognize always that our decision is necessarily more or less faulty. Every man's knowledge of a moral standard is more or less faulty and his ability to reach it depends largely upon his birth and his early training, and at this point heredity enters the problem. We must remember that there are some limitations to perfect freedom. Every one of us has received a certain inheritance from the past. We do not come into this world with equal moral endowments, though in the great essentials we may have equal possibilities which are to reach their culmination only after many generations of progress. We are hampered or helped somewhat by the influences of the past—the influences that have predominated in the lives of those who were before us. A boy may come into the world bearing the discord and the intemperance which an impetuous, impassioned father and a peevish, improvident mother gave him, and another comes into the world in a home where strong manhood and gentle womanhood have united to give him the choicest gifts and most gracious influence. Now, we cannot say that the first boy will surely go wrong and the second will surely go right. It is impossible to reckon the course from the early start. But the probabilities are that the two lives will for a time likely diverge in the direction of their first tendency. Suppose they do, the first boy becoming an intemperate, thriftless man. The second grows up to manhood, retains his social standing and his character is marked by no flagrant fault. One has become a man whose life is very imperfect; the life of the other is better than the average. But in our judgment let us be sure that we consider well just how far the inheritance of birth has entered into this difference.

One is impulsive and improvident, the other calm, careful, and self-controlled. Sometimes one goes on a spree, and the latter not satisfied with a good measure of success adopts an underhanded method and cleverly cheats his competitors in business. Society calls one man a drunkard and the other a great financier; but the recording angel judges otherwise, and he who was born to better things doubtless receives the greater condemnation.

So he, often, who does a grave wrong, and yet struggles even in doing it against the inborn tendencies of his being, this man is far less to be blamed than is the man who, born to nobleness surrenders himself to envy, selfishness and greed that is cloaked and hidden under the guise of cleverness and skill. We have no right to severely condemn another until we know the influences that have surrounded him. Very often the white soul may be found in her, who born to evil tendencies and influences by superiors in power and attraction, caught in snares by some cloaked lion of society, is in one who, sheltered and shielded by the safe guards of society and home, has a selfish evasive disposition and resorts to many illegitimate means of self-aggrandizement and meets no harsh censure in human judgment.

If we had one moral standard perfectly clear and fixed, and then if each one were born with the same amount of ability to come up to the standard, surrounded by the same circumstances, then all moral values and issues could be settled very quickly. But the fact remains that neither of these things is true. Each observes things from a little different standpoint from what all others observe them. We are much agreed upon the great essential elements in the moral ideal, but in all its details we differ. What seems right to one man seems wrong to another; until you know our standard your judgment of us cannot possibly be just.

The slums of the city and certain localities in the country give one man his moral ideal, the culture and wealth of a home give another to the daughter of the rich man—they are both but faulty ideals of the one perfect measure.

We can never know the amount of real struggle which has entered into the effort made by any one else to come up to his moral standard. A man, weak and fearful, may have won a great victory without giving evidence of it. We see the defeats and not the victories of others. The failures are evident and the successes unnoticed.

"Who made the heart,
"Tis He alone
Decidedly can try us;
He knows each chord, its various tone,
Each spring its various bias.
Then at the balance let's be true.
We never can adjust it,
What's done we partly may compute,
But know not what's resisted."

And we should remember that it would be absurd to try to help an overloaded horse by heaping more burdens on him. So, we cannot help in the world's work by throwing stuff in the way of another who is struggling with his part. Without the dialect of Robert Burns we close with one of his wisest verses:
"In men, whom men pronounce as ill,
I find so much of goodness still;
In men whom men pronounce divine,
I find so much of sin and blot.
I hesitate to draw the line
Between the two where God has not."

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful
cures made by Dr.
Kilmer's Swamp-Root,
the great kidney, liver
and bladder remedy.
It is the great medicinal triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by
Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing
lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst
form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested
in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper
who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book
telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble.
When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and Home of Swamp-Root
dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.
Don't make any mistake, but remember
the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's
Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton,
N. Y., on every bottle.

KILLS CATARRH GERMS.

Breathe Hyomei and Be Cured of Catarrh—Costs Nothing If It Fails.

Breathe Hyomei for a few minutes four times a day, through the neat pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit, and benefit will be seen at once. Continue this treatment for a short time, and
your catarrh will have been cured
by Hyomei.

There is no roundabout way in Hyomei's medicinal action; it does not try to cure a disease of the head by putting medicine in the stomach. It fills the air you breathe with balsamic healing,
that soothes the irritated and smarting membrane, destroys the germs of catarrh that are present
in the head and throat, and is the only treatment that can be relied upon to cure.

When using Hyomei the air
you breathe will be like that on the mountains high above the sea
level, filled with volatile, antiseptic
fragrance that heals and cures
the irritated mucous membrane of the air passages.

This treatment has been so successful, curing 99 per cent. of all who have used it, that Hyomei is now sold by G. R. Wiley under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it does not benefit. You run no risk whatever in buying Hyomei. If it did not possess unusual powers to cure, it could not be sold upon this plan.

The complete Hyomei outfit
costs $1.00 and comprises a hard rubber inhaler, a bottle of Hyomei
and a dropper. The inhaler will last a lifetime, and additional bottles of Hyomei can be obtained for 50c.

Watch the Snow Storms.

As we remember it there were
thirteen snowstorms last winter,
the first falling upon the thirteenth
of November. It perhaps is merely a coincidence that the first snow
of the present season came on the same day of the month. There is an old saying that the number of snowstorms of the year is governed by the day of the month on which the first one occurs. This fact at least will furnish some amusement in watching to see if
the old saying will again come true this year.—York Transcript.

Couldn't Lift Ten Pounds.

Doan's Kidney Pills Brought Strength and Health to the Sufferer, Making Him Feel Twenty-Five Years Younger.

Sick kidneys cause a weak, lame or aching back, and a weak back makes a weak man. Can't be well and strong until the kidneys are cured. Treat them with Doan's Kidney Pills. Here's the testimony of one man cured.

J. B. CORTON.

I could have raised ten pounds of weight from the ground, the pain was so severe. This was my condition when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. They quickly relieved me and now I am never troubled as I was. My back is strong and I can walk or ride a long distance and feel just as strong as I did twenty-five years ago. I think so much of Doan's Kidney Pills that I have given a supply of the remedy to some of my neighbors and they have also found good results. If you can sift anything from this rambling note that will be of any service to you, or to any one suffering from kidney trouble, you are at liberty to do so.

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Corton will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address: Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sold by all dealers; price, fifty cents per box.

The Eucalyptus Secret.

The gigantic Californian variety of the Eucalyptus tree counteracts malaria: How, botanists have often wondered, since the foliage is scanty and not aromatic enough to affect the atmosphere. Fresno County experimenters now incline to the opinion that the prescription exerts its effects underground, and that any large tree (cottonwood, Texas pecan, etc.) will do the same by forcing its network of roots through the subsoil and thus draining off the moisture of the surface strata.—Health Culture.

BERLIN, N. H.

John D. Green was sentenced to thirty years at the State prison at Concord, Dec. 1, for the murder of Mrs. Mary Lockhart of West Milan, last fall.

Orders have been received at the U. S. Recruiting station in this city to open enlistments for the cavalry and infantry branches of the service. Enlistments have been made for the coast and field artillery only since August, but all four branches are now open to men desiring to enter the service. The local station which is at present in charge of Sergt. Charles T. Dickson of the recruiting service is doing a good business and it has been determined to make the station a permanent recruiting office.

Fire was discovered on the morning of Dec. 2, in the barn office of Mrs. C. M. C. Twitcheell and but for the brave and wide-awake ones of Millau the barn and dwelling house would have been totally destroyed and possibly extended to neighboring buildings. Prompt action skillfully directed put out the fire in half an hour and the family were able to re-settle the goods in the home without fear of further annoyance. The men have the sincere thanks of the family for their brave and successful deed.

Mrs. A. K. Murdock, Mrs. J. Howard Wight, Mrs. Quincy Bridges, Mrs. Lizzie M. Fortner, Mrs. J. P. Doby and Mrs. Thomas Mahern were in Lancaster last week in attendance at a meeting of the White Mountain Temple, Rathbone Sisters.

RECTOR OF ST. LUKE'S,

Ashburnham, Ontario, Testifies to the Good Qualities of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

ASHBURNHAM, Ont., April 18, 1903.—I think it is only right that I should tell you what a wonderful effect Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has produced. The day before Easter I was so distressed with a cold and cough that I did not think to be able to take any duties the next day, as my voice was almost choked by the cough.

The same day I received an order from you for a bottle of your Cough Remedy. I at once procured a sample bottle, and took about three doses of the medicine. To my great relief the cough and cold had completely disappeared and I was able to preach three times on Easter Day. I know that this rapid and effective cure was due to your Cough Remedy. I make this testimonial without solicitation, being thankful to have found such a God-sent remedy.

Respectfully yours,
E. A. LANGFELDT, M. A.,
Rector of St. Luke's Church.

To Preserve Glen Ellis Falls.

Harvey N. Shepard of Boston and H. P. Kelkey of Salem, Mass., who were in Gorham, N. H., last week in the interest of the Appalachian club of which the two gentlemen are prominent members, looked over the region in the vicinity of Glen Ellis Falls with a view to recommending the purchase of sufficient land to insure the preservation of this natural wonder. They were very much pleased with the place and very favorably disposed to the purchase which they will probably recommend to the club upon their return. The lumber companies who control the land in the vicinity have signified their willingness to sell a territory surrounding the falls to the club.

ROOT WASHERS.

Two Good Ones at Quite a Low Cost.

It frequently happens that farmers are obliged to harvest potatoes, turnips and other roots when the ground is quite wet, and, as a consequence, so much earth adheres to them as to render them unfit for marketing or feeding to stock. This is especially the case where the soil is clayey and sticks like plaster; it is then almost impossible to remove it without washing each root or tuber separately. This disagreeable task may be eased and facilitated considerably by using the contrivance shown in figure 1. It consists of a kerene barrel hung in a frame, as shown in the illustration. Two openings are made in one side of the barrel—a large one, two broad staves wide, and a small one only one inch wide. The pieces cut out are used for lids, both of which are fastened with hinges and buttons, and are made to fit tight by having thick cloth tacked around their edges. Half a bushel of potatoes or roots are placed in the barrel with two or three buckets of water, the lids are closed and buttoned, and the barrel is slowly turned. If they are very dirty, open the small aperture, and by turning the barrel back and forth allow the water and mud to run out. Add clean water and turn again. They will soon be cleansed, when the large aperture may be opened, and the roots or tubers emptied into a basket. The fastenings at each end of the barrel can be made by any blacksmith, and they should be bolted on with one-quarter or three-eighths inch bolts. With this simple contrivance a man can wash a large quantity of roots in a day without catching cold or a cholera. If kept out of the sun such a contrivance will last a lifetime. In figure 2 is shown an easily made potato and vegetable

VEGETABLE WASHER.

table washer for household use. The ends of the cylinder are cut out of inch board and are twelve inches in diameter. The shaft runs through and has collars, to which the ends of the cylinders are fastened to hold them firm. Strong, bright wires are fastened from end to end, as seen in the illustration. Five of these are fastened together, and form the lid to the aperture through which articles are admitted. The end of the lid is fastened by means of a loop, which springs over a button. The vegetables to be washed are placed in the cylinder, the box is half filled with water, and by turning the crank, or moving it back and forth, they are quickly cleansed without making cold fingers. An ordinary tub or a half barrel arranged as seen in figure 3, may be used for the same purpose.

A Remarkable Hen Story.

For steady and continuous laying it is doubtful if there are any hens in the world to equal those of a suburban banker. This gentleman tells with great satisfaction a story that illustrates well the almost incredible prowess in egg-laying of his hens. "Some time ago," he will begin, "an egg was left for a nest egg in the place where my hens lay. This nest egg, the other day, hatched, and I have now one lonely little chick, which several dozen mothers care for. Here is the explanation of this miracle: My hens are such steady layers that one would not sooner get off the nest egg, having deposited a fresh egg beside it, than another would slip on, and in her turn lay. Thus by dozens of different mothers the solitary egg was hatched. Though no one hen 'sat' or 'clocked' on it, nevertheless it was kept always warm, and in due time there stepped forth a lonely but vigorous little chick."—Philadelphia Record.

Farm Machinery.

Even a small farm must have more or less machinery, while on a large one the investment must be heavy. Under any conditions more machinery will be destroyed by rust than by wear. A little care will prevent this.

Melt together over a gentle fire a pound of lard free from salt and a lump of rosin about the size of a hickory nut. When the whole is melted remove it from the stove, and stir it slowly until cold. Keep this covered from dust. Whenever any machine, from an apple parer to a thrashing machine, is out of use, clean it by scraping with a wooden knife whittled from any hard wood, use an old woolen rag and rub over every part liable to rust with this compound; give all such parts a thin coating.

Keep a few panes of window glass and a paper of tacks or some putty on hand. When the window pane is broken, don't makeshift; replace it.

BOATS BUILT BY SAVAGES.

South Sea Islanders Experts in Constructing Vessels.

In the Marshall group of islands in the south seas is a little tall of coral known as Likieeb atoll.

About 40 years ago a Portuguese sailor was landed there from a whaling ship.

Soon he married the daughter of a chief and became a trader. After many years an American captain visited the islands during a trading voyage in the south seas, and when his vessel shortly afterward became unseaworthy he set to work on the beach to build a new one.

The Portuguese whaler's two sons helped him and learned a great deal about the operation. The island had fine hard wood on it, just the kind of timber that shipbuilders value, because it will not rot or waterlog readily. The captain at last succeeded in finishing a good 40-ton schooner and sailed away in her.

Before long the two boys had begun to teach the natives something of what they had picked up, and soon instead of the primitive canoes and dugouts that the Marshall Islanders had been using for centuries, the folk of the Likieeb atoll began to build canoes made of carefully fashioned timber and pinned together with rivets.

Now there is a real shipyard on this little speck lost in the wide Pacific. A high roof under the palms on the beach greets the mariner, and when he lands he sees vessels on stocks, modern tools lying around and everything looking just as it does in a shipyard anywhere on the American coast; only instead of workmen in overalls he sees dark natives with hardly any clothing.

If a chief wants a schooner of say, 12 tons, built for him, they charge him $1,000 for it; but if a poorer person wants the same kind of a vessel they will charge many hundred dollars less. They do this quite openly, and explain it by saying that the chief, being rich, can afford to pay more than a poor person can for the same thing.—Washington Post.

Fashion Cure for Embonpoint.

If you know a lady, or, for that matter, a gentleman, whose composure and pleasure in life has been seriously disturbed by what is sometimes euphemistically termed "a tendency to embonpoint," advise her, if she has not already discovered it for herself, that the fashionable cure of this season consists in using the breath-winding skipping rope. Of course, most adipose people, like the rest of us, have already had a certain amount of practice in literary skipping; it was for this that popular novels and "human interest" editorials were invented. But the exercise thus obtained is, as a rule, somewhat less violent, somewhat more sedentary than that afforded by a rope and a shady spot in the back yard. Perhaps this skipping mania is only a passing fad, for, truthfully, it is a less exciting sport than golf or canoeing; yet while it lasts it is an excellent thing for people who insist on good form to try on.—Boston Transcript.

Black Skin and Sun Protection.

On the bare arm paint a broad line in Indian ink and expose the arm to the strong sunshine. A slight inflammation sets in on the unprotected skin, but not under the black paint, which excludes the light rays (but, of course, not the heat rays).

Some days after the skin is darker (sunburned), except where the Indian ink was painted, where is a white line in the skin. Exposing the arm again, the inflammation sets in only in the white line.

The brown pigment caused by the sun (sunburned) at the first exposure protects the skin against the chemical rays. Therefore are negroes black, and travelers of white skin may protect themselves in the tropics from the sun by black or red paint.—London News.

Sick Blood

Feed pale girls on Scott's Emulsion.

We do not need to give the reasons why Scott's Emulsion restores the strength and flesh and color of good health to those who suffer from sick blood.

The fact that it is the best preparation of Cod Liver Oil rich in nutrition, full of health stimulation is a suggestion to why it does what it does. Scott's Emulsion presents Cod Liver Oil at its best, fullest in strength, least taste.

Young women in the "teens" are permanently cured of the peculiar disease of the blood which shows itself in paleness, weakness and nervousness, by regular treatment with Scott's Emulsion.

It is a true blood food and is naturally adapted to the cure of the blood sickness from which so many young women suffer.

We will be glad to send a sample to any sufferer.

FOUR THRONES OF RUSSIA.

Founded on the Ruins of Foreign Civilization.

An opponent of Russia writes to a foreign newspaper: "There were least four great Tartar thrones, standing on the ruins of other civilizations. Those four were the thrones of Moscow, Constantinople, Delhi and Peking. At Moscow the Tartar called himself Christian, at Constantinople Mussulman and at Peking Buddhist, but his spirit is always the same, and we know what it is. East and south and west the Tartar roamed and only country that flung him back in his native barbarism was Japan. There he goes on to argue that Russia is a yellow peril."

Oxen Devoured by Sea Serpents. Sea serpents date back to the days of Aristotle, who wrote: "The serpents of Libya are of enormous size. Navigators along the coast report having seen a great quantity of bones of oxen, which they believe without doubt to have been devoured by the serpents. These serpents pursue them (the oxen) when they left the shore and upset one of their tails."

Boston's Early Fire Department. The Boston fire department was changed from a partially voluntary one to a paid one in 1873. Dr. W. Lam F. Channing of Boston invented the system of telegraphic fire alarm which was introduced in 1851. Three years later the first steam fire engine was introduced, but it was not until 1880 that the old hand engines were displaced for steam engines in all the houses.

Ignorance and Prejudices. The strongest and most unreasonable prejudices arise from the deepest ignorance of the world and of men. Those who are the most impatient faults in others usually have many faults of their own, while those who have schooled themselves to be patiently tolerant will usually be found to have schooled themselves in other virtues.

The Highest Wooden Trestle. The highest wooden railroad trestle in the United States has recently been completed by Georgia contractors and Georgia workmen on the California branch of the Northern Alabama railway, a few miles northwest of Birmingham. The bridge is across a small mountain creek and is 116 feet high and 720 feet long. It contains 600,000 feet of timber.

Women Physicians in Algeria. The French government in Algiers propose to establish a woman doctor in every village where the native population is large enough, the native women being prevented by their social customs from consulting male physicians. In Algiers a dispensary has already been opened for women.

Sick Blood

Feed pale girls on Scott's Emulsion.

We do not need to give all the reasons why Scott's Emulsion restores the strength and flesh and color of good health to those who suffer from sick blood.

The fact that it is the best preparation of Cod Liver Oil, rich in nutrition, full of healthy stimulation is a suggestion as to why it does what it does.

Scott's Emulsion presents Cod Liver Oil at its best, fullest in strength, least in taste.

Young women in their "teens" are permanently cured of the peculiar disease of the blood which shows itself in paleness, weakness and nervousness, by regular treatment with Scott's Emulsion.

It is a true blood food and is naturally adapted to the cure of the blood sickness from which so many young women suffer.

We will be glad to send a sample to any sufferer.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

FOUR THRONES OF RUSSIA.

Founded on the Ruins of Former Civilization.

An opponent of Russia writes to a foreign newspaper: "There were at least four great Tartar thrones, each standing on the ruins of other civilizations. Those four were the thrones of Moscow, Constantinople, Delhi and Peking. At Moscow the Tartar calls himself Christian, at Constantinople Mussulman and at Peking Buddhist; but his spirit is always the same, and we know what it is. East and south and west the Tartar roamed and the only country that flung him back into his native barbarism was Japan. Then he goes on to argue that Russia is itself a yellow peril."

Why the World Wants Peace.

In the midst of war, the world is turning toward peace. Now the Christmas holidays approach and "peace and good-will among men" has something more than sentiment and tradition to rest upon. The prayer for peace that comes swelling from all over the earth, with a volume which fairly gives the weight of a demand or command, is now a living, vital force in the affairs of all the civilized nations. In Christendom to-day there is no more significant and promising fact than this. There is developing with giant strides a world public opinion, and it is a world-opinion which makes for peace. More and more the masterful peoples are coming to look upon war as barbarism, as a relic of the savage age, as a cruel and destructive monstrosity wholly unworthy to survive in our modern civilization.

It seems an anomaly to talk of universal peace while one of the bloodiest wars of modern times is in progress. But the carnage which has marked this great struggle in the far East is the very thing that has given momentum to the current movement to stop wars. Lihao-Yang, Shaho, Port Arthur, have shocked the sensibilities of the world. They have roused a public sentiment everywhere. The peace movement is no longer confined to the dreamers and the sentimentalists, worthy host that pioneered the way; it has spread far and wide, till it has embraced the men who do the world's work, the men of commerce and finance, the men who have their hands upon the throbbles of the great industrial machine, the men who pay the taxes that are swallowed up in war, the men of journalism, of the pulpit, of the periodical press, the men of leadership in action and in thought. It has found its way into the royal palaces, the presidents' houses, the chancelleries, the foreign offices, the State departments of the powers. We may justly say that its growth and its promise together form the most notable world-event of the year that is now drawing to a close. It would be unwise to delude ourselves with the hope that war is impossible, that universal peace has spread her white wings over all the earth, that henceforth the civilized world is to be free of conflict and carnage. The millennium has not come. But it is true that the hazard of war breaking out has been sensibly lessened, and that the horrors which accompany it are sure to be minimized if and when it comes.

A Place of Rest.

Store up health and energy for the long months of winter by making a pilgrimage to the "St. Catharine's Well." Bathe your tired bodies in its sea salt waters; inhale breezes from Lakes Erie and Ontario; walk or drive about the slopes and valleys of the Niagara peninsula; visit its wonderful power development. A modest outlay will give you a renewed grip on life and pleasant memories of a well spent holiday. No better specific can be found for rheumatism, gout, neuralgia, liver troubles or cases of nervous prostration. than these waters, and you will find the Welland equipped with everything necessary for health or pleasure. Write G. T. Bell, G. P. & T. A., Grand Trunk Railway System, Montreal, for illustrated descriptive matter and full particulars.

No More Suffering.

If you are troubled with indigestion, get a bottle of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure and see how quickly it will cure you. G. O. A. Thomson, of Spencer, Ia., says: "Have had Dyspepsia for twenty years. My case was almost hopeless. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure was recommended and I used a few bottles of it and it is the only thing that has relieved me. Would not be without it. Have doctored with local physicians and also at Chicago, and even went to Norway with hopes of getting some relief, but Kodol Dyspepsia Cure is the only remedy that has done me any good, and I heartily recommend it. Every person suffering with indigestion or Dyspepsia should use it." Sold by G. R. Wiley. D. W.

WIT AND WISDOM.

Youthful in years, but of determined spirit, was the little Bowdoinham girl who was required to write a composition on the seasons. Much displeased at her task, when driven to it, she produced the following unique article. "There are four seasons, spring, summer, autumn and winter. Some like one best, and some like another; but for my part give me liberty, or give me death!"

Half the ills that man is heir to come from indigestion. Burdock Blood Bitters strengthens and tones the stomach; makes indigestion impossible.

"I never expected to live long enough to hear it, but I have been spared," said the aged Prohibitionist, with a smile of satisfaction.

"To hear what?" asked the man in the next row.

"Kentucky crying aloud for water," replied the old man.

"I had a running, itching, sore on my leg. Suffered tortures. Doan's Ointment took away the burning and itching instantly, and quickly effected permanent cure." C. W. Lenhart, Bowling Green, O.

They had been bragging on their respective henyards, these two old Bowdoinham "boys," and as the evening drew to a close, it was an even draw between them. Finally, the ancient lad in the coonskin cap, came nobly to the fore. "Ever heard tell of my old setting hen?" "Naw," drawled his comrade of the long bow, "what about your setting hen?" "Well, she's seventeen, if she's a day, and just as game as ever she was; only one draw back to her, she's so old now, that for over a year, she hasn't laid a thing but rotten eggs!"

Economy.

"Now, dearest, just see," said Mrs. Newlywed, "since I commenced keeping our accounts we haven't got nearly so many bills to pay. Now, see, you haven't got any butcher's bill or milkman's bill to pay at all this month."

"But, darling, we certainly had plenty of meat and milk all the time."

"Yes, dearest," replied Mrs. Newlywed, "but I bought them from the grocer."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Hard to Refuse.

Rummy Robinson—"How in de name of all hohos do yer get dem kind ladies to give yer de price of a drink?"

Boozy Bob—"Why, I always tell dem dat I'm going to spend it in a model saloon like de one in New York."

Thoroughly at Ease.

"You appear to take life pretty easy," said the housewife, as she mixed some sawdust with milk and palm-ed it off as breakfast food.

"Yes, indeed, mum," grinned Sandy Pikes, stretching out in the wheelbarrow, "de whole world is a 'cosy corner' wid me."

More Time Needed.

"Do you believe there is honor among thieves?" said the grocer to the customer.

"Well, I can't tell yet," replied the man; "you see, sir, I've only been in this town a week."

A Fashionable Mother.

He—"So you're going to take the dog with you, and leave the baby home with the girl?"

She—"Certainly! I'd be afraid to leave poor little Fido with that girl."

"Whew! Who gave you this cigar, old man?"

"Dauber, the artist."

"I thought so. It's just like him."

"In what way?"

"Why, it's cheap, full of flaws and draws poorly."

Trouble of the Packers.

"This is vacation season," remarked the Observer of Events and Things "and the trunk packers are having quite as much trouble as are the meat packers."

Not Many Left.

"Are there any Leftenants in the Russian army?" asked the Englishman.

"Well," replied a Japanese sympathizer, "I guess there are a mighty few left."—Yonkers Statesman.

No Room For Doubt.

"Why," asked the fat policeman, "do you say the prisoner is a married man?"

"Because," replied the great detective, "he is wearing safety pins instead of suspender buttons."

ONLY A WISH.

I wish I were my lady's veil,
Softly to lie against her cheek,
Where dimples play at hide and seek
And rosy blushes flush and pale.

I'm sure that I should never fall
To feel a charm when she would speak;
I'm sure her glances would prevail
And draw me closer to her cheek.

If wishes were of some avail,
But pshaw, they're only vain and weak,
An idle dream—a childish freak—
And yet, and yet, the thoughts sail—

I wish I were my lady's veil.
Chicago Chronicle.

Why He Didn't Know.

Judge Jonathan Dixon of the supreme court of New Jersey has a habit, well known to old practitioners before him, of asking three questions of counsel arguing at the bar. The first one is usually simple, and the lawyer answers carelessly; the second one is a little more drastic, and the respondent replies with trembling uncertainty; the third is bound to be a poser fraught with humiliation.

On one occasion Richard V. Lindabury of Newark was presenting a case to the court of errors, and when the first question was innocently propounded, he said:

"I don't know."

"Don't know!" cried the judge.

"Why don't you know?"

"Because I haven't heard the other two questions," said the wily advocate.—New York Times.

Shy, Not Stupid.

At a dinner given to Sir Alfred Harmsworth in commemoration of his recent knighting, some one said of the guest of honor:

"Our friend Harmsworth as a schoolboy was shy and quiet. One day, to his horror, an inspector called him up before the class."

"You appear to be a clever lad," the inspector said. "What do five and one make?"

"The little fellow made no answer. 'Come, now,' said the inspector, 'suppose I gave you five rabbits and then another rabbit, how many rabbits would you have?'"

"Seven," said Harmsworth.

"How do you make that out?"

"I have a rabbit of my own at home."—Detroit News Tribune.
